Missionaries, faith-based humanitarian and aid workers, short-term church volunteers and all Christians seeking to minister internationally are facing dual threats: An increasingly unstable and dangerous world, and an alarming trend of targeting of Christians by terrorist groups.

CCI's Field Security Seminar is an intensive, 3-day course designed to prepare Christian workers and volunteers to live, travel and work more safely in high-risk locations and situations. Training is field-based and interactive - based on real-world events and cases.

Course Description:

With today's complex security environments, personal security training is a necessity. Food for the Hungry and Crisis Consulting International have partnered to bring the very best personal security training to Kenya. This course has been specifically designed to meet the security needs of humanitarian, relief, and development workers who are working in insecure and conflict environments in Africa.

The Field Security Seminar (FSS) involves 3 days of intensive security training with a strong emphasis on field-based, real-life exercises. Participants will be trained to work in increasingly dangerous venues. The training is field based and highly interactive. Core components of the training include managing violent encounters, hostage survival, convoy planning and security, personal security and safety, operating safely in environments involving landmines, unexploded ordinance and improvised explosive devices.
